During his early retirement years he and Sandra traveled extensively in the US and Europe. He also pursued his lifelong passion for aviation. Quickly becoming an AMP certified aircraft mechanic, owned and restored several classic airplanes and finally built his own experimental aircraft, flying it out of Greensfield Airport in Moscow Mills before his illness caught up with him. His favorite place in the world was either in the air or on the ground working on his or a friend's aircraft. He will be missed by all his flying buddies at Greensfield.

“ Bob always helped others on their airplanes. He always seemed to show up just as a problem arose. He was there to help fix it. Bob taught me a lot and I will always be thankful for his friendship.

“ Bob helped me often building my RV-6A which would never have had an operational electric system without his help and knowledge. He was special to all of us at Greensfield.

“ Bob was the first to welcome me to Greensfield Airport and became a fast friend, mentor, and all around GREAT GUY! He patiently helped me with the build of my Zenith 801 and many other airplane systems trouble shooting. Bob was a special friend and influence to my young son Matthew. In fact, when Matthew heard of Bob's passing today, he met me in the driveway with a very sad face to tell me the news and to let me know that we'll see Bob again in heaven. Godspeed Captain Bob, Godspeed!

“ Bob,

I will always remember you driving your MG, happy as can be. Working around the house fixing everything, and I mean everything. Your patience and your kindness taught me many things. My fondest memories are of all of us sitting around the dinner table, always a great conversation, filled with laughter and many stories. It made you never want to leave that table. Thank you for that, because without it, I never would have even known what a family dinner table time was... but because of you, and your family, I do. Thank you for everything you did, were, and are. Love you Bob, fly in the sky, I know I'll see you up there smiling.
