“ I remember talking with Grandpa and Dad, and they were both teaching me the right way to polish boots. To clean the boot first, add less polish than you think you need for the first coat, and always keep going until it shines. The lessons were always more than just how to clean and polish boots. They were about life, finishing what you start, and make it shine.

“ My first memory in life is sitting in Grandpa's lap as a toddler playing with his shiny watch. Listening to his laugh, always so warm, and his arms always felt so safe. As I got older I would sit at his feet & ask for directions or advice on driving. We'd talk about fishing or cars. I always knew no matter what, I was loved.
